State of Indiana, et al., Respndent(s)

On Petition For Writ of Certiorari
To the United States Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

Mark A. Brackman
P.O. Box 2611
Peoria., AZ 85389
(623) 487-9060

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Did the 7th Circuit (and the Northern District Court of Indiana) and Indiana Supreme Court err by ignoring the violations of Brackman's rights as claimed, leaving Brackman without any remedy for violations of: (a) redress of his grievances; (b) due process and equal application of the law; and (c) access to public records, which prevented access to Allen county superior court?

2. Did the 7th Circuit (and the Northern District Court of Indiana) and Indiana Supreme Court err by ignoring Brackman's claim of constitutional rights violations, where other citizens have their Petitions and Motions decided on a routine basis, have access to copies of public records and have access to court in Allen County Superior/Circuit Court?

3. Did the Northern District Court of Indiana err in refusing to amend the Complaint, (twice) to include two Clerks of the Allen County Superior Court as Attorney for the Clerks, (Laura Reuss) identified, by sworn affidavit indicating that two Clerks acted on their own, (in revealing a part of the conspiracy) which deprived Brackman of and violated his constitutional rights?

4. Did the 7th Circuit (and the Northern District Court of Indiana) err in rejecting or ignoring Brackman's claims under the Bill of Rights, First and Fifth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution, as a result of prejudice against a "male" or against a totally disabled American Veteran whose service connected disabilities are 100 percent?

PARTIES TO THE PROCEEDINGS

Petitioner is Mark A. Brackman, who is a (100%) percent totally disabled American Veteran with a "service-connected" chronic disease, [defined at 38 U.S.C. 101(13)], received in the line of duty while in active Military service.

Respondents are State of Indiana; Steve Carter, Attorney General for the State of Indiana; Governor Frank O'Bannon, Governor of the State of Indiana; Sue A. Gilroy, (former) Secretary of State; Allen County Attorney; County of Allen; Allen County Commissioners: Edwin Rousseau, Marla Irving, and Linda K. Bloom, (Commissioners); Stanley A. Levine, (an Attorney at the time of issues in the Allen County Petitions who was promoted to a Judge at the time of the conspiracy in Allen County Superior Court, previously representing Ann Loni Hoang, whose promotion hinged on a published decision from the Court of Appeals, related to Brackman and Hoang); and Ann Loni Hoang.

Mark A. Brackman, Petitioner

v.

State of Indiana, et al., Respondent(s)

On Petition For Writ Of Certiorari
To the United States Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

Mark A. Brackman, respectfully petitions for a writ of certiorari to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit in this case, resulting from the judgment of the U.S. District Court of Northern Indiana, both courts having ignored the Complaint's main issues of violating Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution.

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion of the court of appeals is unreported. The opinion of the district Court is also unreported. There was no opinion or even a decision from the Allen County Superior Court, as Brackman's (two) Petitions and all Motions were ignored and languish un-addressed without any Answer being filed to either Petition, without any response filed to any of the multiple Motions. No judicial decision was ever made on the issues raised in the two Allen County Petitions and no redress of Brackman's grievances have ever been made.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the court of appeals was entered on March 26, 2004. A petition for rehearing was denied on April 30, 2004. Three Orders from the district court issued on October 17, 2003, June 27, 2003 and June 2, 2003 respectively. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254(1), 1257, and Discretionary Review is requested under 28 U.S.C. 1651 to review questions on the merits that violations of Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution to redress of grievances, due process and equal protection of the law and access to public records and to Allen County Court were ignored and/or covered up and are of imperative public importance. [See Davis v. Jacobs 454 U.S. 911 (1981)]

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

The First Amendment to the United States Constitution provides in relevant part that "Congress shall make no law  abridging the freedom of  or the right of the people  to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." The Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides in relevant part that "No person shall be  deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." The Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, Section 1 provides in relevant part that "No State shall  deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." The Supreme Court held in Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 491: "Where rights secured by the Constitution are involved, there can be no rule making or legislation which would abrogate them." Other citizens are allowed to pursue their petition for redress of their grievances in Allen County Courts on a routine basis. Brackman's two Petitions and Motions are ignored, leaving Brackman without any redress of grievances or due process of law. By ignoring violations of Brackman's rights, federal courts promote evil of a nature that is of a National concern or of imperative public concern. The court of appeals pretends to dismiss for "lack of subject matter jurisdiction," to simply avoid issues of violations of Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution.

STATEMENT

1. This case involves the violation of Brackman's rights to have either of his two Petition(s) heard, decided, appealed and resolved to redress Brackman's grievances. When Allen County Superior Court ignored both of his Petitions, one filed on August 20, 2001 and a second one on January 24, 2002, Brackman exhausted his State and County remedies and sent certified mail letters of demand to each of the defendants in an attempt to resolve the rights violations and obtain an investigation of Allen County Court, using risk management required procedures without any resolution due to an on-going conspiracy of the defendants to deprive a totally disabled American Veteran from redress of his grievances, access to the Courts, to due process and equal application of the law(s). The Allen County Superior Court Clerk refused to provide Brackman with a copy of an index of proceedings, having received payment for the three sheets of paper, and a copy of Petitioner's Identification, which 3 pages comprise public records, but not made available to Petitioner; when similar requests for other records in the past had been provided to Brackman from the Clerk. [Said 3+ pages of the index of the public records in Allen County Superior Court, Case Number 02D07-8907-JP-425 are prima facie evidence Petitioner's two County Petitions and Motions were ignored and never ruled upon, judicially noticed, See Appendix #10].

2. A. When Petitioner brought issues of rights violations to the district court, Case Number 1:03CV068, dated February 20, 2003, the defendants failed or refused to deny or admit Petitioner's claims the two County Petitions and all Motions were ignored in violation of Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution, and furthered an on-going conspiracy to prevent Brackman from access to Allen County Court. Defendants focused their "comments" on other (non) issues, using artifices and devices to manipulate, mislead and deceive. The district court intentionally ignored issues of violation of Brackman's rights raised in Brackman's Complaint. It was the duty of district court to decide rights violations; however, district court

"erred" by ignoring each of Brackman's rights. District court acted wrongfully by its coordinated deceptions.

The district court has departed from the accepted and usual course of judicial proceedings and sanctioned such departure by a State Court that ignored Brackman's two Petitions and all of his Motions, giving rise to the federal issue of rights violations, as to call for an exercise of this Honorable Court's supervisory power. Brackman has been denied his day in court by County, State, federal district court and 7th Circuit Court of Appeals. The federal Complaint did not assert an "error" of fact or rule of law. The federal Complaint was about First and Fifth Amendment violations of right to redress of grievance; right to due process and equal protection of the law and access to court, when the two Petitions and multiple Motions filed in Allen County were ignored. The federal district court ignored violations of Brackman's rights. The court of appeals ignored the rights violations. All courts have acted in a furtherance of Allen County's conspiracy to deprive Brackman of rights secured by the Constitution.

2. B. District court magistrate Cosbey actively attempted to prevent Brackman from obtaining the three sheets of Index from the Allen County Superior Court, by issuing an Order refusing to allow Brackman's perfected Subpoena duces tecum to obtain any discovery. Cosbey also prevented amendment of the Complaint; while Attorney for the County, Laura Reuss identified part of the conspiracy indicating her clients (Clerks) acted on their own and thwarted one of the magistrate's Order(s) by providing a copy of the Index, by falsely alleging the records were furnished as a result of a non-existent "Records Request" thereby providing Brackman with the prima facie evidence the Allen County Superior Court ignored the two Petitions and all Motions filed by Brackman. [See copy of Index in Appendix #10, showing no decisions were entered regarding his Petitions and Motions].

2. C. When district court bifurcated the defendants, after being alerted by the court of appeals the county Defendants had been dismissed improperly, a lawyer representing Allen County, (G. William Fishering) entered a sworn affidavit (Dkt #63) indicating the State Attorney General's Office was responsible for investigating wrongdoings of Allen county Clerk(s), in an 11th-hour statement, after all State Defendants had been wrongfully dismissed by district court judge Lee. Requests for reconsideration were denied.

3. Brackman's issues before district court and before the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals were not about any of the merits inside the Allen County Superior Court Petition(s) and Motions (that were not heard) or about any previous decisions on other Complaints. The only issues before the federal courts were the violations of Brackman's right to obtain redress of his grievances, due process and equal application of the law and refusal to provide copies of three sheets of Index from public records during the filing of two Petitions on 8/20/2001 and 1/24/2002, all of which rights were ignored by all of the Federal, State and County Courts.

4. The facts are clear the federal Courts attempted to conceal and cover-up wrongdoing of Defendants by acting expediently, crossing the line of justice to do evil. It was wholly arbitrary and capricious for district court to avoid constitutional questions raised by Brackman's Complaint as stated on its first Page (Appendix #7, Dkt

#1) by pretending to decide the merits of issues inside two Petitions and Motions that were ignored by Allen County Court. Federal court decisions (Appendix #3, #4, #5) are all based on pretended merits of issues that were never specifically heard or decided by Allen county court. This Honorable Court has overruled prior decisions where, as here, the necessity and propriety of doing so has been established. (See Patterson v. McLean Credit Union, 491 U.S. 164, 172, Pp 17-23).

5. Thus, the egregious behavior of the Courts below have brought an issue of vital importance ripe for review, as the federal Court's pervasive and continuing egregious behavior(s) have been noted worldwide. Brackman is only one of many victims of this pervasive, egregious behavior being perpetrated specifically by the lower courts in question.

6. The 7th Circuit Court of Appeals had an opportunity to correct the district court's wrongs; however, they too joined in furtherance of a nationwide wrongdoing which is designed to circumvent their targeted victim's constitutional rights and Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution in specific.

7. Each day, Brackman's rights continue to be violated and will continue to be violated unless this Court of last resort acts to relieve those violations by acting on its own motion or otherwise to intervene on these issues that federal courts are acting in pervasive egregious behavior(s) to avoid protecting people's rights by crossing the line of justice to do evil, knowing that no "good" will ever come of their evil acts.

8. This Court should review violations of Brackman's rights secured by the constitution on its merits.

9. This is a prima facie case of rights violation, shown by the absence of any decision on the two Petitions and multiple Motions filed in Allen County Superior Court, as furnished by opposing counsel, Laura Reuss, [See Appendix #10, Dkt #50, comprising prima facie evidence there was no decision, order or judgment ever made by an Allen County judge, and no "entry" of an "Answer" or "Response" to any Motion].

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

1. The court of appeals has dismissed a case in error by pretending the federal district court did not have "subject matter jurisdiction" based on defendants' pretended issues that were never even heard by Allen County Superior Court as Petition(s) were ignored. The court of appeals erred when they ignored Brackman's real issues which were in turn ignored by the federal district court and court of appeals. The Complaint clearly stated the issues on the first page, identifying the question that was brought to federal district Court for resolution that were clearly identified as the violations of Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution, and such limited issues had nothing to do with any previous Complaints or decisions. [See Appendix #7, Dkt #1]

2. Initial inquiry should have been whether a constitutional right would have been violated on the facts alleged, for if not, there is no need for further inquiry into the matter. District court should have considered Defendant's motions for summary judgment(s) under the standard that Brackman's allegations (Petitions and Motions were ignored and copies of public records were not furnished) were true and the second part of the inquiry should have been whether Brackman's constitutional rights were clearly established. At some point district court had the duty to deny Defendant's motion(s) (for summary judgment and to dismiss) on the merits regarding the clear violations of Brackman's rights.

3. The court of appeals' decision is incorrect. Brackman's Constitutional rights violation issues were ignored at both federal courts. In deciding on other issues not raised by Brackman's Complaint, the court of appeals deliberately, intentionally, arbitrarily and capriciously addressed only defendants non-responsive issues that were off point from the issues of rights raised in Brackman's complaint and joined in with the lower federal district courts' ignoring violations of Brackman's constitutional rights that had occurred in Allen County Court, by pretending to address other Complaints and attempting to resolve merits of other issues that were never heard, decided or ruled on in Allen County.

4. Of course, it would appear on a "pretended" surface basis, the federal courts were "without subject matter jurisdiction" on pretended "non-issues," when in fact the federal courts had jurisdiction to hear and decide the issues of violations of Brackman's constitutional rights.

5. To allow the court of appeals' decision or the district court's erroneous decision(s) to stand, promotes further egregious abuses of Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution, as egregious behaviors of the federal courts are a national phenomenon of judicial abuse as is being stated on the internet, worldwide. Review by this Court of this known "judicial abuse" is therefore warranted as thousands of American soldiers returning home face similar judicial abuse.

I. THE COURT OF APPEALS INVALIDATED THE CONSTITUTION (Supreme Law of the Land)

1. The 7th circuit court of appeals has again invalidated the Constitution and its Amendments I, V and a small part of XIV that were carefully crafted by our forefathers to further the compelling interest in protecting citizens from unlawful ravages of a broken judicial system and egregious behavior of ignoring a Petitioner's redress of grievance(s) or violation of Brackman's rights secured by the supreme law of the land.

2. Brackman can find no case law that fits these instant issues of "ignoring," since "no decision" renders "no record" for an "appeal" and no other procedural methods will ever lead to any published cases, or any decision what-so-ever. The clerks can now boast how "clever" they were to violate Brackman's constitutional rights by "ignoring" his Petitions and Motions, as this further "judicial abuse" permeates an outlaw court system intending to over-throw the supreme law of the land by its deliberate and unconscionable acts.

3. The federal district court ignored and invalidated the Constitution and its Amendments I, V and a small part of XIV in a similar manner to that of the court of appeals and acted wrongfully in furtherance of violating Brackman's rights by egregious deceptions stated in their decisions.

4. The Allen County Superior Court has invalidated the Constitution and its Amendments I, V and a small part of XIV thereby indirectly controlling the Supreme Law of the Land through egregious wrongdoing, which only this Court can now correct.

5. Attorney for Allen County Defendants identified that her "client(s)" [i.e. "Clerks" of the Allen County Superior Court] were the only ones responsible for violating Brackman's rights in an affidavit filed in the eleventh hour. (See Dkt #62) District court magistrate Cosbey first denied Brackman's attempt to amend his Complaint on March 25, 2003, (See Dkt #18) and judge Lee subsequently refused to allow Brackman to amend the Complaint on October 17, 2003 by pretending it was too late [See Appendix #3, Dkt #85], when amendments to Complaints are to be liberally allowed in favor of Brackman. [See Rule 15 of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure; Compania Management Company v. Rooks Pitts & Poust, 290 F.3d 843, 849 (7th Cir. 2002)(citing Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 181-82 (1962)), Appendix #3 Dkt #85, Page 9-10].

6. An amended Complaint would have named the two Clerks of Allen County Court as defendants only after such wrongdoing based information had been finally revealed to Brackman and to judge Lee by the county defendants' lawyer, Laura Reuss in the eleventh hour. Judge Lee only pretended he was exercising his discretion to prevent Brackman from amending the Complaint on October 17, 2003 in covering-up what magistrate Cosbey had already ordered Seven (7) months earlier in furtherance of the wrongdoing.

7. The court of appeals erred by pretending to believe the deceptions perpetrated by district court judge Lee, who falsely alleged there was a decision made in Allen County Superior Court when there was no "judicial" decision ever entered on the two petitions that were ignored, [See prima facie evidence, Appendix #10 showing no "decision" by a judge was made, only a misleading "Notice" initialed by a File Clerk]. The court of appeals wrote the following false statement in their decision:

> "Having received no response to his petition either from the circuit court or from Ann Loni Hoang, his child's mother, Brackman moved for a default judgment, but the circuit court sent him notice of its decision denying his request." [See Appendix #2, Page 2, 2nd Paragraph]

This statement is critical to the understanding of this case. The defendants have conspired to deceive the court about the nature of the "Notice" which is only an excerpt taken from the index of the record at Allen County Court and entered by a File Clerk with the initials of "CEM" as no judicial "Order" or Judgment was ever entered in the court record as determined by a judge. [See "fold-up" form letter (allowing Brackman's name and address to show through a cellophane window on an envelope); Appendix #9 attached to ex parte communications letter from Hoang, Dkt #2]. It is believed a Clerk was directed to send this "Notice," which is not a "decision," by one or more of the conspirators, since no "decision" was ever provided in the documents obtained from Laura Reuss and no "decision" is listed, (See Index, Appendix #10)

8. The Court of appeals alleged it was "confused" (by the deceptions perpetrated by district court judge Lee) as stated in its Order, Appendix #2, page 3, paragraph 4 which stated:

"We cannot understand how Brackman's lawsuit proceeded so far. Both of the claims raised in his complaint - denial of access to the state courts and wrongful inclusion of his veterans' benefits as income for child support - are beyond the scope of federal subject matter jurisdiction because of the Rooker-Feldman doctrine. See Rooker, 263 U.S. 413; Feldman, 460 U.S. 462. And because the district court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over either claim, it was unnecessary for the court to analyze Brackman's complaint differently for the two groups of defendants; the resolution for each is the same." [Emphasis added regarding false reliance on Rooker]

9. It should be noted neither of the two "claims" believed by the court of appeals were the subject of the federal complaint. There was no "denial of access." The Petitions and Motions were ignored. No "denial" was ever filed. There was no "issue" brought in federal court other than violation of Brackman's rights to redress of grievances, right to due process, right to equal application of the law and right to public records. The Complaint had to be filed to obtain three (3) sheets of paper (Index of Records) [See Appendix #10].

10. Brackman had attempted to have various defendants investigate the wrongdoing in Allen County, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. 4, misprision of felony, and violations of his rights by certified mail, without receiving any response and to no avail.

11. Pretended "confusion" by court of appeals such as this prevents others reading their decision from an understanding of the egregious nature of the violation of Brackman's rights.

12. This deception interpreted by misinformation from 3 district court orders is critical to the understanding of the errors perpetrated by the court of appeals: The issues in the federal Complaint were the violations of Brackman's rights, NOT the issues that were ignored by the Allen County Court, as no decision has ever been entered on the merits and as a result Brackman's right to redress of his grievances and right to due process have been violated by Allen County Clerk(s) (and their co-conspirators) giving rise to the issues brought to the attention of federal district court.

13. It is clear that pretending the issues were "child support related" and that a (non-existent) "decision" gives rise to the Rooker-Feldman doctrine is simply smoke and mirrors to deceive the court of appeals and to avoid this court's review.

14. In this case, the Rooker-Feldman doctrine does NOT apply, no "decision" exists on the Allen County Petitions and Motions, violations of Brackman's rights are the only subject of the Complaint before district court. Brackman was unable to raise issues in Allen County because his petitions and motions were ignored. Rights violations can not be avoided by claiming violation of Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution are "inextricably intertwined with the state-court judgments" when the state court ignored the petitions and motions and did not decide anything. The federal claim succeeds to the extent that "the state court wrongly decided the issues before it." See Lewis v. Anderson, 308 F.3d 768, 772 (7th Cir. 2002); Long v. Shorebank Dev. Corp., 182 F.3d 548, 557-58 (7th Cir. 1999). District court erred and deceived the court of appeals. Allen County clerks control the law of the land.

15. As to the district court's motions to dismiss, "the court must accept the factual allegations as true and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff." Vickery v. Jones, 100 F.3d 1334, 1341 (7th Cir. 1996). The district court failed to accept the factual allegations of the violations of Brackman's rights were true and failed to find in favor of Brackman, therefore the motions to dismiss were in error.

16. The defendants in the district court's motions argue Brackman is barred against bringing a complaint against a State (County) due to the 11th amendment. Under this concept no one would ever be able to bring a Complaint against another "person" or "entity" associated with the State or County regarding violations of rights, leaving the 11th amendment opposed to the 1st, 5th and 14th amendments. That was never the intent of the framers of the Bill of Rights. District court erred in its reasoning as defendants were named in their individual capacity.

17. The defendants also argued the doctrine of respondeat superior cannot be a basis for liability. Brackman served each defendant individually in their personal capacity not their "supervisory capacity" by certified mail and not having discovery allowed by magistrate Cosbey, was not allowed to amend his complaint to name those others who may have been supervised by the defendants. The defendants acting under color of state law deprived Brackman of his rights secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States. Parratt v. Taylor, 451 U.S. 527, 535 (1981), overruled in part on other grounds, Daniels v. Williams, 474 U.S. 327 (1986). This type of action is "based upon personal liability and predicated upon fault." Wolfe-Lillie v. Sonquist, 699 F.2d 864, 869 (7th Cir. 1983).

18. Brackman did not base his Section 1983 claim on the theory of respondeat superior. District court erred.

19. Brackman established a cause of action under Section 1985, 1985(2) and 1985(3) as a male, as a disabled American Veteran whose rights were violated by (female) Clerks and defendant Levine who had been promoted to judge based on his published case in the Indiana court of appeals, regarding Brackman and Hoang, his client. Brackman's Complaint clearly explained how various defendants violated his rights secured by the Constitution. See Koch v. Mirza, 869 F. Supp. 1031, 1038 (W.D.N.Y. 1994). Claims founded on Section 1985(2) must demonstrate some interference with the course of justice in state courts. Davis v. Hudgins, 896 F. Supp at 570. Claims founded on Section 1985(3) must allege a class-based discriminatory motive on the part of the conspirators. Rosadio v. Curtis, 885 F. Supp. 1538, 1541 (M.D. Fla. 1995).

20. As to Levine's motion to dismiss, his argument the Rooker-Feldman doctrine prohibits federal district courts from reviewing state court civil judgments is fatally flawed, since there was no state court civil judgment on the subject petition(s) and the district court Complaint was concerning violations of Brackman's rights orchestrated by Levine. There was no state court "proceedings," as violations of Brackman's rights were the Complaint's issues where Allen County ignored all of Brackman's Petitions and Motions.

21. Brackman's claim that other judgments by Allen county and district court are void based on lack of jurisdiction over the parties or subject matter, or lack of power to enter an order procured by fraud can be attacked at any time, in any court, either directly or collaterally. See Long v. Shorebank Dev. Corp., 182 F.3d 548, 555 (7th Cir. 1999). That is what Brackman has done and continues to do in this court.

22. Brackman's claim of violations of rights is distinct from any previous state court judgments and results from his Petitions (that were never considered) and motions that were ignored as the source of the federal Complaint.

23. As to Hoang's three motions contained inside her ex parte communications with judge Lee that begin: "Dear sir:" and end with "Thankyou," it is inconceivable how such a defective document can be construed as three motions due to fatal defects, such as lack of certification of mailing or service, un-sworn rantings, no identifying words that would indicate three motions, [Appendix #6, Dkt #2, see photostat of original] which conveniently had a copy of a Notice (that was only sent to Brackman), and a copy of Indiana supreme court order dismissing original action attached, and filed nothing below.

24. Further evidence of judge Lee's bias and prejudice is the lack of equal protection of law for Brackman to construe his Complaint or to even consider his claims of rights violations clearly stated in the Complaint. [Appendix #7, Dkt 1].

25. Judge Lee attempts to deceive court of appeals as regards Brackman attempting to reverse the published decision obtained by his friend, judge Stanley Levine that was instrumental in defendant Levine's promotion to a judge, namely Matter of the Paternity of C.L.H., Hoang v. Brackman, 689 N.E.2d 456 (Ind. Ct. App. 1998), transfer denied, 698 N.E.2d 1191.

26. In fact, Brackman relied on said published decision, as it supports his claims (that were never decided), since VA compensation is not insurance, is means-tested and is therefore an exception to "income" used for calculations by the county. Had his petitions not been ignored, a decision would have ultimately been favorable to Brackman. This fact is the source of why Brackman's petitions and motions were ignored, and why defendant Levine was involved in wrongdoings. However, the merits of the county petition were never at issue. The violation of Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution were the only issues before the district court. Judge Lee attempts to prejudice the courts with his Orders for the primary purpose of covering-up the wrongdoings of his friend, judge Levine by ignoring Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution.

27. As to a motion to dismiss under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6), dismissal may only be had if it is beyond doubt that there are no set of facts under which the complaint's allegations would entitle the plaintiff to relief. Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46 (1957). Here, one set of uncontested facts, supported by prima facie evidence, Index of Records, (furnished by opponent lawyer Reuss, See Appendix #10, Dkt #50), namely that violations of Brackman's rights did occur when Allen County ignored his two Petitions and multiple Motions, as shown by what is not present in the Index, judicially noticed.

28. Additionally, Brackman's 2 motions for amending the Complaint should have been granted, first by magistrate Cosbey and secondly by judge Lee, as they were timely made after Brackman had been furnished with the prima facie evidence necessary to sustain his claims rather than on any suspicion or speculation that two Allen County Clerks were involved in the conspiracy to deprive Brackman of his rights as identified by their lawyer Reuss.

29. District court judge Lee and defendants acted wrongfully by covering-up the violations of Brackman's rights and judge Lee wrote three district court Orders in furtherance of the conspiracy between judge Lee and his friend, Stanley Levine, (one of the defendants, now a judge) residing in the same town: Fort Wayne, Indiana.

30. Neither a "Clerk" of Allen County Court, nor a File Clerk (with initials "CEM") has any authority to decide Petitions or Motions, (without some direction from a judge) and would have identified judge Levine as the person who had removed answers from the file, changed the index, attached a Sheriff's Affidavit of service upside down to the back of an unrelated document, refusing to provide the prima facie evidence of the index of the records to Brackman and had directed said Clerks to ignore Brackman's Petition(s) and Motions, since Levine had obtained his appointment as a judge due to his published case in the Court of Appeals. His fear of exposure of wrongdoing haunts him today. There is no judicial immunity available once the Clerks testify as to whom it was that directed them to ignore Brackman's Petitions and Motions. This gave judge Lee and magistrate Cosbey their motives to cover up the wrongdoings of judge Levine and is part of the furtherance of the conspiracy. These multiple contingencies of wrongdoings brings the odds into one-in-several-billions it was an accidental mistake or act as opposed to the overwhelming odds it is a conspiracy.

31. In an analysis of the three Dismissals by judge Lee, this court must consider how the various components of the long drawn out Orders are erroneous and are instituted as a smoke screen to cover up the violations of Brackman's rights which are the issues of Brackman's

Complaint, [See first page of Complaint, Appendix #7, Dkt #1] which states in pertinent part:

> "It is a prima facie case of a First and Fifth amendment rights violation where the question is whether or not Plaintiff's right to Petition for redress of grievances and due process have been violated." [Appendix #7, Dkt #1]

32. All of the arguments so eloquently listed by judge Lee ignore the violations of Brackman's right to redress of grievances, due process of law and equal protection of the law and his right to obtain copies of the three pages of the index of record, and access to Allen county court, as stated in his Complaint that was also ignored.

33. Judge Lee pretends that violations of Brackman's rights are "inextricably intertwined" with issues not decided in Brackman's two Allen County Court Petitions to such an egregious extent, the court of appeals states:

> "For Rooker-Feldman is not limited only to issues actually raised in state court but also encompasses claims "inextricably intertwined with the state-court judgment [such that] the federal claim succeeds only to the extent that the state court wrongly decided the issues before it." See Lewis v. Anderson, 308 F.3d 768, 772 (7th Cir. 2002); Long v. Shorebank Dev. Corp., 182 F.3d 548, 557-58 (7th Cir. 1999)." . . . "... any success on this claim would mean that the state supreme court wrongly decided that the circuit court had not engaged in any wrongdoing." [Emphasis added, Appendix #2, P. 4, 2nd Paragraph]

34. The state supreme court did not address the wrongdoing of Allen County Superior Court in its decision to "dismiss an original action" on some pretended "procedural" grounds to avoid granting redress on the violation of Brackman's rights; it simply avoided making a decision in furtherance of the wrongdoings of the "Clerks" of Allen County and judge Levine. [Appendix #8 attached to Dkt #2]

35. It is not coincidence defendant Hoang never answered either of the two petitions and never responded to any of the Motions in Allen County, yet wrote an ex parte letter in a communication with judge Lee, and attached the Indiana Supreme Court decision [Appendix #8] and attached a copy of the form letter "Notice" sent only to Brackman [Appendix #9] to the district court judge, without providing a copy to anyone else, [noting there was no certificate of mailing or service to anyone], while it is clear Hoang sent a copy to judge Lee.

36. It never occurred to the conspirators that Hoang never had a copy of the form letter "Notice" from Allen County Court that was only sent to Brackman. It is clear Hoang's answer or responses, (if any) were removed from the record in Allen County Court. It is also clear that Hoang was manipulated in the wrongdoing(s) to include the Indiana Supreme Court decision and "Notice" (that has no decision backing it) only sent to Brackman with her hand written ex parte communication to judge Lee, for cover-up purposes.

37. It is perfectly clear what stretch of the imagination it would take any honorable judge to convert the hand written ex parte letter into three motions. [Appendix #6] The egregious act of judge Lee are beyond discretion of an honorable judge to ignore the Letter's inadequacies.

II. THERE IS NO REMAINING PROCEDURE TO CORRECT THE LOWER COURTS' EGREGIOUS BEHAVIOR

1. Having exhausted all remedies, Petitioner has no other procedure remaining other than to have this Court act on its own motion or discretion to correct the blatant egregious and on-going behavior of the federal, state and county courts crossing the line of justice to do evil in an expedient manner of ignoring redress of grievance and violations of Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution. To do nothing will only encourage the continuing egregious federal court's unlawful behavior which is of imperative public importance and therefore requires justice from a determination in this Court.

2. Prima facie evidence obtained from attorney Laura Reuss (Allen County Index of Record "Chronological Case Summary as of 04/08/03", Appendix #10) shows no decision was ever made in Allen County Superior Court on either of two Petitions or on any of the Motions filed by Brackman, and judicial notice is requested of this fact.

3. The record on appeal is clear that Brackman's timely request to amend the Complaint could not have been made earlier on the "suspicion" the Clerks acted on their own, as Brackman was not furnished with the prima facie evidence until after 04/08/03, despite the false allegations by judge Lee in his decision [Appendix #3, Dkt #85].

4. What is further clearified by the record is magistrate Cosbey's Order preventing Brackman from amending his Complaint to include the Clerks as Defendants dated

3/25/2003, [Dkt #18].

5. Brackman was placed in a catch-22 in that he could not prove the Clerks acted on their own or conspired with judge Levine, who is a Defendant (as a lawyer) in the federal Complaint.

6. When Brackman obtained the prima facie evidence supporting his claims from the County's lawyer Laura Reuss, it became clear Laura Reuss was not involved with the furtherance of the conspiracy and that magistrate Cosbey and judge Lee were, as a result of their egregious acts covering up violations of Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution.

7. Judge Lee's furtherance of conspiracy became transparent the moment he claimed Brackman failed to timely ask to amend in his Order, dated October 17, 2003, [Appendix #3] while court of appeals failed to properly address violations of Brackman's rights in its decisions, [Appendix #2].

III. THE QUESTIONS PRESENTED ARE RIPE FOR REVIEW

1. No further proceedings in the lower courts are needed to clarify the questions presented or to render those questions suitable for resolution by this Court. The court of appeals invalidated the Constitution as it applies to Brackman's rights as did the federal district court and the Allen County Superior Court, and as did the Clerks of Allen County Superior Court, all of whom have ignored Brackman's right to redress of grievance, right to due process, right to equal protection of the law, and right to obtain copies of public records. Such rights violations continue each day, without abatement unless this Court acts on its own motion or discretion to resolve these constitutional rights violation issues.

2. Moreover, "We the People, as a matter of justice" have identified the egregious behavior of the federal courts at public websites and will continue to identify the many victims of such "judicial abuse" as adverse advertisement of "Justice" unless this court acts on its own motion, supervision or otherwise to put a stop to the lower courts' continuing egregious behavior.

3. The courts in this matter have stained the integrity of "Justice" and have been identified as courts in overthrow of the supreme law of the land. The only question remaining is whether or not this Court wants to acknowledge the problem and resolve it in a clear unanimous decision.

4. It is clear Brackman's constitutional rights (redress, due process, etc.) have been violated. The rights were clearly established and claimed in formal demands timely sent under risk management procedures by certified mail to each of the Defendants prior to bringing the federal Complaint.

5. The prima facie evidence is clear the Defendants knew what they were doing for years, and knew that their acts, and omissions to act or failure to cause appropriate authorities to act were wrongful acts, were done under color of law, when the 1st affidavit of service from a Sheriff was attached upside down in the record, and when the County Court refused to do their duty to send Brackman a copy of the index.

6. Of course, Brackman (the object of the conspiracy) was kept in the dark during the conspiracy, until Attorney Laura Reuss revealed who was responsible by affidavit and furnished prima facie evidence, [Appendix

#10]. Secondly, the district court magistrate knew he joined with furtherance of the conspiracy when he ordered that a perfected subpoena duces tecum for that index would not be issued in an attempt to directly and adversely affect the outcome of the district court's decision. Thirdly, the magistrate refused to allow Brackman to amend the Complaint by adding the Clerks as defendants on 3/25/03, [Dkt #18]. Fourth, judge Lee refused to allow an amended Complaint to include the Clerks of the Allen county superior court on October 17, 2003, after their lawyer, Laura Reuss identified her "clients" (Clerks) acted on their own (to deprive Brackman of his constitutional rights secured by the Constitution). [Appendix #3, Dkt 85].

7. Anyone who is the subject of a conspiracy is the last to know of the details and runs the risk of losing procedurally because of the statute of limitations; however, in this case, the statute of limitations begins again each day the petitions and motions languish in Allen County.

8. Resolution is not to now allow Brackman's petitions to be heard. Resolution is assessing a large enough monetary penalty for the violation of Brackman's rights to prevent any of the co-conspirators from ever acting wrongfully again and to set an example of them for others to follow.

9. It is believed the magistrate and district court judge acted against Brackman partly because of his being a (100%) percent totally disabled American Veteran with a "service-connected" chronic disease, received in the line of duty while in active Military service. Also the (female) Clerks in Allen County Court acted to deprive Brackman of his constitutional rights simply because Brackman is a male, attempted to thwart justice by depriving Brackman of his rights by controlling and ignoring his Petitions and Motions under color of law. District court intended to ignore and did violate Brackman's rights as a part of the wrongdoing of the federal courts continuing behavior of expediency to cross the line of justice to do evil, as further identified at public websites.

10. The court of appeals identified Brackman's "only" remedy from the Indiana Supreme Court was to seek certiorari under 28 U.S.C. §1257. See Schmidt v. Schmidt, 324 F.3d 484, 486 (7th Cir. 2003); Gen. Auto Serv. Station LLC v. City of Ill., 319 F.3d 902, 905 (7th Cir. 2003), [Appendix #2].

11. This egregious behavior has become so pervasive it is considered to be commonplace wrongdoing in the federal courts by informed and reasonable citizens. It is clear that a reasonable person would have concluded the conduct of the wrongdoers was unlawful in the situation confronted.

IV. DISCRETIONARY REVIEW

1. This Court may grant a writ of certiorari to review the action of the court of appeals under 28 U.S.C. 1651 in its declining to allow an appeal on Brackman's rights violations and review questions on the merits of rights violations sought to be raised by the appeal, especially when the merits of rights violations were ignored by the court of appeals and the district court. [See Davis v. Jacobs, 454 U.S. 911 (1981)]

2. At no time did the 7th circuit court of appeals or the district court allow for a decision on the violations of Brackman's rights to be a subject of their denial(s).

Instead, their denial(s) followed expedient and pervasive patterns of ignoring issues being complained of, (a National phenomena).

3. Court of appeals and district court focused on collateral and non-responsive issues raised by Defendants that had no bearing on rights violations complained of in Brackman's Complaint. (See page 1 of the Complaint, made a part of the Appendix #7, Dkt #1).

4. At no time did the seventh circuit court of appeals or the district court or the Defenants ever attempt to answer Brackman's simple question on page one of the Complaint:

> "It is a prima facie case of a First and Fifth amendment rights violation where the question is whether or not Plaintiff's right to Petition for redress of grievances and due process have been violated." [Appendix #7, Dkt #1]

5. Written errors in the Orders (Appendix #1, #2, #3, #4, #5, #8), and in Hoang's ex parte Letter to judge Lee (App #6) are so numerous, a rebuttal of each deception would take hundreds of pages. It is as though the lower courts, the lower court judges and lawyers can't read, or alternatively refused to provide justice because they knew they were wrong and attempt to cover-up their evil by further subtle deceptions. The Supreme Court held in Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436:

> "Where rights secured by the Constitution are involved, there can be no rule making or legislation which would abrogate them."

6. In this case, violations of Brackman's rights secured by the Constitution were ignored.

CONCLUSION

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

ORDER

On June 2, 2003, this court entered an order granting defendant Ann Loni Hoang's motion to dismiss, granting the State Defendants' motion to dismiss, and granting defendant Stanley Levine's motion to dismiss. As a result of this order the following defendants were granted a favorable judgment: Ann Loni Hoang; Stanley Levine; the State of Indiana; Steve Carter, Attorney General of Indiana; Governor Frank O'Bannon, Governor of the State of Indiana; and Sue Anne Gilroy, Former Secretary of the State of Indiana. The remaining named defendants in this case are: Allen County Attorney; County of Allen; Allen County Commissioners; Edwin Rousseau; Marla Irving; and Linda K. Bloom. These Defendants are known as the "County Defendants".

On June 2, 2003, the Clerk of the Court inadvertently entered Judgment in favor of all of the defendants. On June 16, 2003, the plaintiff, Mark A. Brackman ("Brackman") filed a Notice of Appeal. On June 25, 2003, the County Defendants filed a motion for summary judgment.

The Clerk's Judgment entered on June 2, 2003 is hereby VACATED and SET ASIDE. However, upon review of this cause the court has determined that there is no just reason for delay in entering a final judgment in favor of defendants Ann Loni Hoang, Stanley Levine, the State of Indiana; Steve Carter, Governor Frank O'Bannon, and Sue Anne Gilroy. Thus, the Clerk of the Court is instructed to enter an such a Judgment, entering final judgment with respect to these six defendants, pursuant to Rule 54(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

The County Defendants' motion for summary judgment shall be briefed out in accordance with applicable Local Rules. As Brackman is proceeding pro se, the Court issues contemporaneously therewith a Lewis v. Faulkner notice informing Brackman of his responsibility to Respond to the motion for summary judgment.

SO ORDERED this 27th day of June, 2003.

ORDER

We consolidated two appeals arising from a single lawsuit filed by Mark Brackman against his minor child's mother, her lawyer, and a number of state and county officials in Indiana. Brackman alleged that the defendants had conspired to deprive him of access to the Indiana courts to prevent him from disputing aspects of a child support order. The district Court initially dismissed one group of defendants and made its order immediately appealable under Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b); the court later granted summary judgment to the remaining defendants. Brackman contests both orders, but we conclude that the district court was without subject matter jurisdiction to enter either.

* After an examination of the briefs and the record, we have concluded that oral argument is unnecessary. Thus, these appeals are submitted on the briefs and the record. See Fed. R. App. P. 34(a)(2).

The dispute underlying this litigation began several years ago when an Indiana appellate court held that Brackman's veterans' disability benefits could be included as part of his income available to satisfy a child support order. In re Paternity of C.L.H., 689 N.E.2d 456 (Ind. Ct. App. 1997), transfer denied, 698 N.E.2d 1101 (Ind. 1998). Brackman, who lives in Arizona, has been trying to modify this order for some time now under the theory that his veterans' benefits may not be withheld for child support because the benefits are "non-assignable" and exempt from creditors. See 38 U.S.C. § 5301. In November 1999 he sued the same defendants involved here along with the Department of Veterans Affairs and the United States Postal Service in federal court for the District of Arizona, accusing the defendants of violating §5301 by wrongfully garnishing his veterans' benefits to satisfy the support order. After that suit was dismissed in August 2000 for lack of subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to the Rooker-Feldman doctrine, see Rooker v. Fid. Trust Co., 263 U.S. 413 (1923); D.C. Court of Appeals v. Feldman, 460 U.S. 462 (1983), Brackman in November 2000 filed another suit against the same defendants in the Northern District of Indiana. In March 2001 the district court in Indiana likewise dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.

Brackman then went back to the Indiana state courts. In the summer of 2001 he petitioned the Allen County circuit court that had issued the original child support order to modify his payment obligation, again under the theory that § 5301 rendered his veterans' benefits exempt from withholding. Having received no response to his petition either from the circuit court or from Ann Loni Hoang, his child's mother, Brackman moved for a default judgment, but the circuit court sent him notice of its decision denying his request. Brackman in January 2002 again petitioned the Allen County circuit court for a modification of the support order. Again receiving no response, he moved in March for a default judgment, and at the same time asked the court clerk for copies of three pages of the case record. The clerk returned his payment for the copies along with his motion for default, apparently without explanation. In April he petitioned the Supreme Court of Indiana for a writ of mandamus compelling the circuit court to either grant a hearing on his petitions or enter a judgment of default. Alternatively he asked for the court to appoint a "special judge" to supervise the circuit court. But the supreme court dismissed his petition.

That decision brought Brackman back to federal court. Reasoning that he was unfairly ignored by the Indiana courts. Brackman in February 2003 sued the State of Indiana and several state officials ("state defendants"); Allen County, the county attorney, and county commissioners ("county defendants"); Hoang; and her attorney in the district court for the Northern District of Indiana under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and 1985. Brackman alleged that the defendants must have conspired to keep him out of state court because the Allen County circuit court had failed to grant a hearing on his petitions or enter a default judgment; he also alleged that the defendants had conspired to wrongfully withhold his veterans' benefits to satisfy his child support obligation. He sought both declaratory and pecuniary relief in the neighborhood of $330 million.

The state defendants along with Hoang and her lawyer moved to dismiss. The district court granted the motion in early June but inadvertently entered an order dismissing Brackman's complaint against all of the defendants. Later that month the court realized the mistake and corrected the order of dismissal to include only the state defendants, Hoang, and her lawyer. The Court, however, entered its amended order under Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b) so that Brackman could appeal the decision immediately. The court reasoned that the Eleventh Amendment barred Brackman from proceeding against the state defendants, and that anyway it lacked jurisdiction under the Rooker-Feldman doctrine to consider his claims to the extent they related to the child support order. And the court concluded that neither Hoang nor her attorney were state actors for purposes of the civil rights statutes. The court further observed that this was the third time Brackman had contested the child support obligation in federal court and sanctioned him by ordering that any subsequent complaints naming Hoang would have to be reviewed by the court to prevent her harassment.

Brackman accepted the invitation to appeal immediately, and we docketed his appeal from the June 2003 order as case no. 03-2649. Meanwhile, while briefing proceeded in that appeal, the litigation continued in the district court. In October 2003 the court granted summary judgment to the remaining county defendants, Fed. R. Civ. P. 56, because Brackman had produced no evidence that these defendants had taken any action with respect to him, or that any of them had a duty or the authority to supervise the circuit court or its staff. Brackman filed another appeal from this order, which we docketed as case no. 04-1189.

We cannot understand how Brackman's lawsuit proceeded so far. Both of the claims raised in his complaint - denial of access to the state courts and wrongful inclusion of his veterans' benefits as income for child support - are beyond the scope of federal subject matter jurisdiction because of the Rooker-Feldman doctrine. See Rooker, 263 U.S. 413; Feldman, 460 U.S. 462. And because the district court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over either claim, it was unnecessary for the court to analyze Brackman's complaint differently for the two groups of defendants; the resolution for each is the same.

Brackman's first claim is that the defendants conspired to deprive him of access to the courts. In support of this claim he alleges that the Allen County circuit court failed to assign a judge to hear his petitions, failed to grant his motion for default, and failed to provide him with three pages of records. But Brackman petitioned for and was denied a writ of mandamus by the state supreme court to compel the circuit court to act on his filings. He may not now challenge or seek damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 or related statutes on account of the supreme court's refusal to compel the circuit court to act; his only remedy was to seek certiorari under 28 U.S.C. § 1257. See Schmidt v. Schmidt, 324 F.3d 484, 486 (7th Cir. 2003); Gen. Auto Serv. Station LLC v. City of Ill., 319 F.3d 902, 905 (7th Cir. 2003).

Even if Brackman did not specifically raise each of the allegations mentioned here in his petition for a writ of mandamus, all issues relating to the circuit court's alleged inactions are barred. For Rooker-Feldman is not limited only to issues actually raised in state court but also encompasses claims "inextricably intertwined with the state-court judgment [such that] the federal claim succeeds only to the extent that the state court wrongly decided the issues before it." See Lewis v. Anderson, 308 F.3d 768, 772 (7th Cir. 2002); Long v. Shorebank Dev. Corp., 182 F.3d 548, 557-58 (7th Cir. 1999). Because his federal complaint alleges that the circuit court's failure to assign a judge to his petitions, grant his motions, and provide him with records was all part of a conspiracy by the defendants to keep him out of state court, any success on this claim would mean that the state supreme court wrongly decided that the circuit court had not engaged in any wrongdoing. Each individual allegation is "inextricably intertwined" with the others, and the district court lacked jurisdiction to consider them even if they had not been raised individually in his petition for mandamus. See Lewis, 308 F.3d at 772.

Brackman's second claim is even more obviously barred. He argues that the defendants wrongfully interpreted the Indiana appellate court judgment to allow his disability benefits to be withheld. But Brackman is really contesting the appellate court's determination that his veterans' benefits can be included for child support, not some independent action by the defendants. Cf. In re Paternity of C.L.H., 689 N.E.2d at 458 ("The [disability benefit] . . . does not appear to be a benefit from a 'means-tested public assistance' program which would be excluded from the definition [of gross income]."). Because Brackman's asserted injury stems directly from the judgment and not the defendants, his present suit requests collateral review of a state appellate court decision - a task that the district court lacks jurisdiction to undertake. See Homola v. McNamara, 59 F.3d 647, 650 (1995). "[A] plaintiff may not seek a reversal of a state court judgment simply by casting his complaint in the form of a civil rights action." Ritter v. Ross, 992 F.2d 750, 754 (7th Cir. 1993).

The judgments of the district court are therefore modified to reflect dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, and as modified, affirmed.

AFFIRMED as MODIFIED.

APPENDIX #2

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF INDIANA
FORT WAYNE DIVISION

FILED
2003 OCT 17 AM11:08

MARK A. BRACKMAN, Plaintiff,	)
v.	)	Civil No. 1:03-cv-068
STATE OF INDIANA, et al., Defendants.	)

ORDER

This matter is before the court on a motion for summary judgment filed by the defendants, Allen County Attorney; County of Allen; Edwin Rousseau; Marla Irving; and Linda K. Bloom ("County Defendants"), on June 25, 2003. The plaintiff, Mark A. Brackman ("Brackman"), who is proceeding pro se, filed his response on July 23, 2003, to which the County Defendants replied on August 8, 2003.

Also before the court is a "Second Supplement to Add Ms. Brown and Ms. Blosser as Defendants for Cause that Laura L. Reuss Claims Clerks Acted on Their Own", filed by Brackman on July 28, 2003. The Court has construed Brackman's filing as a motion to amend. The County Defendants opposed the motion to amend on August 29, 2003. Brackman has not filed a reply.

For the following reasons, the motion for summary judgment will be granted and the motion to amend will be denied.

Summary Judgment Standard

Summary judgment is proper "if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." Fed.

R. Civ. P. 56(c). However, Rule 56(c) is not a requirement that the moving party negate his opponent's claim. Fitzpatrick v. Catholic Bishop of Chicago, 916 F.2d 1254, 1256 (7th Cir. 1990). Rule 56(c) mandates the entry of summary judgment, after adequate time for discovery, against a party "who fails to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party's case, and in which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial." Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). The standard for granting summary judgment mirrors the directed verdict standard under Rule 50(a), which requires the court to grant a directed verdict where there can be but one reasonable conclusion. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 250 (1986). A scintilla of evidence in support of the non-moving party's position is not sufficient to successfully oppose summary judgment; "there must be evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the plaintiff." Id. In Re Matter of Wildman, 859 F.2d 553, 557 (7th Cir. 1988); Klein v. Ryan, 847 F.2d 368, 374 (7th Cir. 1988); Valentine v. Joliet Township High School District No. 204, 802 F.2d 981, 986 (7th Cir. 1986). No genuine issue for trial exists "where the record as a whole could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the nonmoving party." Juarez v. Ameritech Mobile Communications, Inc., 957 F.2d 317, 322 (7th Cir. 1992)(quoting Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., Ltd. V. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586 (1986)).

Initially, Rule 56 requires the moving party to inform the court of the basis for the motion, and to identify those portions of the "pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, which demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue of material fact, Celotex, 477 U.S. at 323. The non-moving party may oppose the motion with any of the evidentiary materials listed in Rule 56(c), but reliance on the pleadings alone is not sufficient to withstand summary judgment. Goka v. Bobbitt, 862 F.2d 646, 649 (7th Cir. 1988); Guenin v. Sendra Corp., 700 F.Supp 973, 974 (N.D. Ind. 1988); Posey v. Skyline Corp., 702 F.2d 102, 105 (7th Cir.), cert. Denied, 464 U.S. 960 (1983).

So that the district court may readily determine whether genuine issues of material fact exist, under Local Rule 56.1, the moving party is obligated to file with the court a "Statement of Material Facts" supported by appropriate citation to the record to which the moving party contends no genuine issues exist. In addition, the non-movant is obligated to file with the court a "Statement of Genuine Issues" supported by appropriate citation to the record outlining all material facts to which the non-movant contends exist that must be litigated. See, Waldridge v. American Hoechst Corp. et al., 24 F.3d 918 (7th Cir. 1994). In ruling on a summary judgment motion the court accepts as true the non-moving party's evidence, draws all legitimate inferences in favor of the non-moving party, and does not weigh the evidence or the credibility of witnesses. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 249-251, 106 S.Ct. at 2511. Furthermore, in determining the motion for summary judgment, the court will assume that the facts as claimed and supported by admissible evidence by the moving party are admitted to exist without controversy, except to the extent that such facts are controverted in the "Statement of Genuine Issues" filed in opposition to the Motion. L.R. 56.1

Substantive law determines which facts are material; that is, which facts might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248. Irrelevant or unnecessary facts do not preclude summary judgment even when they are in dispute. Id. The issue of fact must be genuine. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c), (e). To establish a genuine issue of fact, the non-moving party "must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts." Matsushita, 475 U.S. at 586; First National Bank of Cicero v. Lewco Securities Corp., 860 F.2d 1407, 1411 (7th Cir. 1988). The non-moving party must come forward with specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Id. A summary judgment determination is essentially an inquiry as to "whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Anderson, 477 U.S. at 251-52. Finally, the court notes that, "[i]t is a gratuitous cruelty to parties and their witnesses to put them through the emotional ordeal of a trial when the outcome is foreordained? And in such cases summary judgment is appropriate. Mason v. Continental Illinois Nat'l Bank, 704 F.2d 361, 367 (7th Cir. 1983).

Discussion

On or about February 20, 2003, Brackman filed his complaint in this matter against the State of Indiana, Attorney General Steve Carter, Governor Frank O'Bannon, Secretary of State Sue Anne Gilroy, Allen County Attorney, County of Allen, Commissioner Edwin Rousseau, Commissioner Marla Irving, Commissioner Linda K. Bloom, Stanley A. Levine and Ann Loni Hoang. The State of Indiana, Steve Carter, Frank O'Bannon, Sue Anne Gilroy, Stanley Levine and Ann Loni Hoang filed motions to dismiss, which were granted by Order dated June 2, 2003.

Brackman alleges that his constitutional rights were violated by the Clerks of the Allen Circuit and Superior Courts in that Brackman was allegedly not furnished with documents from his court packet after mailing a request for the documents, and that his rights were violated by the Allen Superior Court by virtue of the Court's alleged failure to act upon filings he made in conjunction with Allen Superior Case No. 02D07-8907-JP-425.

Brackman's claims arise from the fact that after filing a Summons and Claim/Petition in a case filed in Allen Superior Court, the alleged Respondent, Ann Loni Hoang, failed to answer. Complaint at ¶37. Thereafter, Brackman filed an "Application for an 'Entry of Default'" against Hoang, which was denied without a hearing. Id. Subsequent to that, the Clerk of Courts allegedly failed to send Brackman copies from the court packet as requested. Complaint at ¶38. Finally, the Indiana Supreme Court allegedly refused to assign a special judge to address the alleged wrongs Brackman asserted with respect to the Allen Superior Court's treatment of his case. Complaint at ¶¶39-40.

Brackman claims that his rights pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and 1985 have been violated by the County Defendants. Brackman claims that the County Defendants were responsible for the Clerk's failure to send him documents and alleged failure to take action as to his various filings in the Allen Superior Court. Brackman also claims that the County Defendants instructed or influenced judges and/or staff in the Allen Superior Court not to rule on his filings with respect to Case No. 02D07-8907-JP-425.

An action under Section 1983 is premised on a determination that conduct committed by a person acting under color of state law deprived another individual of rights, privileges and immunities secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States. A Section 1983 action must be based upon personal liability and recovery against an official cannot be vicariously imposed on a theory of respondeat superior. Williams v. Faulkner, 837 F.2d 304, 308 (7th Cir. 1988).

In support of their motion for summary judgment on the Section 1983 claims, the County Defendants argue that Brackman has not alleged that any of the County Defendants were personally involved in the wrongs allegedly perpetrated by the Clerk of Court of the Superior Court. The County Defendants point out that the Allen County Commissioners, Bloom, Irving and Rousseau, and the Allen County Attorney, G. William Fishering, each stated in their affidavit that they took no action with respect to Brackman's request for documents or with respect to his filings in Case No.

02D07-8907-JP-425. The County Defendants further point out that, by law, they could take no action with respect to the alleged failures and wrongs by the Clerk or the Superior Court. With respect to the Superior Court, the County Defendants claim that it is axiomatic that only the Allen Superior Court has the right to make judicial determinations and to direct and control its court employees. (Ind. Const. Art. 3, § 1). Likewise, the Indiana Supreme Court in the case of Noble v. State, 21 N.E. 244, 246 (Ind. 1889), long ago resolved the issue of whether members of either the legislative or executive bodies could exercise any control over the judicial department when it stated that "the courts possess the entire body of intrinsic judicial power of the state, and the other departments are prohibited from assuming to exercise any part of that judicial power." Id.

In the present case, Brackman has alleged that members (the Commissioners) and agents (the Allen County Attorney) of the executive department of the County of Allen instructed or persuaded the Allen Superior Court, a part of the state's judicial department, to ignore pleadings filed in a case in the Allen Superior Court. The County Defendants argue that Indiana law does not allow such an occurrence and that, moreover, the County Defendants have testified that such occurrence did not, in fact occur, permissible or not.

The County Defendants further argue that, with respect to the Clerk of the Allen Circuit and Superior Courts, under Indiana law, the Clerk is a constitutionally created official. (Ind. Const. Art. 6, §2). The Clerk is not a county officer, but an officer of the circuit court. Parsons v. Bourff, 739 F. Supp. 1266, 1267 (S.D. Ind. 1989). As such, the County, through its Board of Commissioners has no ability to control actions or activities of the Clerk or the Clerk's staff.

Moreover, according to the County Defendants, even if the Commissioners and their agents could control the Clerk, the facts in the present case show that they did no such thing with respect to Brackman's allegations. Commissioners Bloom, Irving and Rousseau and County Attorney G. William Fishering have denied instructing or influencing the Clerk of the Allen Circuit and Superior Courts to take any action whatsoever (or to fail to take action) with respect to Brackman's filings or requests. Additionally, the County Defendants testified that they did not know that Brackman was making requests or filing items with the Clerk until he filed his tort claim notice and complaint in this matter.

The County Defendants conclude that since they cannot be held liable on the basis of respondeat superior and since the evidence demonstrates that they took no action harming Brackman, their motion for summary judgment with respect to Brackman's Section 1983 claims must be granted.

In response, Brackman argues that he is alleging that "the County Defendants failed to investigate or cause to be investigated (i.e. did nothing, as admitted on their Affidavits), when they had a clear duty and obligation by law to act regarding reported Fraud and Rights violations committed in the County of Allen and noticed to them by Constructive and Actual notice." (Response at p. 5).

In reply, the County Defendants reiterate their argument that the Office of the Clerk and the state courts are separate and distinct from the Board of Commissioners of Allen County, and that the

Commissioners and their agent, the Allen County Attorney, had no authority to conduct an investigation into allegations of fraud and had no right to attempt to correct alleged wrongs dealt by those persons and/or entities.

It is clear to this court that the County Defendants are correct. There is absolutely no evidence that the County Defendants took any action which caused any harm to Brackman. The County Defendants did not owe a duty to Brackman to control the activities of the Clerk, nor did they have the authority to do so. Moreover, the County Defendants did not have the authority to conduct any sort of investigation regarding the state courts and/or their staff. Accordingly, the County Defendants' motion for summary judgment will be granted with respect to Brackman's claims under Section 1983.

The court will next turn to Brackman's claims under Section 1985. Section 1985 defines a variety of conspiracies, and subsection 3 of Section 1985 provides a right of action for victims of conspiracies. Under Section 1985, a plaintiff must allege that his rights were violated as a result of some class-based animus. Roach v. City of Evansville, 111 F.3d 544, 547 (7th Cir. 1987). The County Defendants argue that Brackman has failed to make such an allegation and offers no facts in support of a contention that he was discriminated against because of some class-based animus. Thus, the County Defendants conclude that Brackman has failed to state a claim under §1985 and they are entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law.

In response, Brackman states that he is "a single white male, with 100% disability from service connected duty as an American Veteran as his class-based animus for discrimination and a victim of this conspiracy of fraud over the course of several years and continuing to this day." Even assuming that Brackman's assertion is adequate, he fails to offer any facts that would support a contention that he was discriminated against because he is white and/or disabled. In fact, there is no evidence that any of the defendants were aware of Brackman's race or alleged disability. Accordingly, summary judgment will be granted in favor of the County Defendants on Brackman's Section 1985 claims.

Next the court will turn to Brackman's requests that the state court decisions against him in Allen Superior Court Case No. 02D07-8907-JP-425. The County Defendants correctly argue that such claims are barred by the Rooker-Feldman doctrine. The Rooker-Feldman doctrine prohibits federal district courts from reviewing state court civil judgments, including all claims that are inextricably intertwined with those judgments. District of Columbia Court of Appeals v. Feldman, 460 U.S. 462 (1983); Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co., 263 U.S. 413 (1923). Therefore, to the extent that Brackman seeks to have this court review the actions of the Allen Superior Court (or any other state court), such claims are barred and summary judgment is appropriate in favor of the County Defendants.

Finally, the court will turn to Brackman's motion to amend, in which he seeks "to allow Lisbeth Blosser, Therese M. Brown and Laura L. Reuss to be included as defendants nunc pro tunc...." Ms. Blosser and Ms. Brown are the former and current Clerks of the Allen Circuit and Superior Courts. Ms. Reuss is the County Defendants' attorney in this case.

Rule 15 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which governs amendments to pleadings, provides that a party may amend its pleadings after a responsive pleading has been served only by leave of court or by written consent of the adverse party. The county Defendants have filed a responsive pleading and have indicated that they do not consent to the amendment. Thus, the complaint may only be amended by leave of court. While amendments are to be liberally allowed, "courts in their sound discretion may deny a proposed amendment if the moving party has unduly delayed in filing the motion, if the opposing party would suffer undue prejudice, or if the pleading is futile." Compania Management Company v. Rooks Pitts & Poust, 290 F.3d 843, 849 (7th Cir. 2002)(citing Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 181-82 (1962)).

In the present case, Brackman has not provided a proposed amended complaint as required by N.D. Ind. L.R. 15.1. However, the County Defendants argue that based upon the presumed content of any such amendment, it is clear that any such proposed amendment should be denied. The County Defendants assert that to the extent that Brackman seeks to name Brown and Blosser in order to question them as witnesses, their becoming defendants to this matter is not necessary. The County Defendants further assert that to the extent that Brackman is claiming that Brown and Blosser violated his constitutional rights by failing to assign a judge, failing to send him copies of a court packet or failing to rule on filings made by Brackman in the Allen Superior Court, that this court should deny Brackman's request because Brackman has unduly delayed his request to amend and because any such amended pleading would be futile.

With respect to timeliness, the County Defendants point out that it is clear from a review of Exhibits "F", "I", and "N" to Brackman's "Affidavit of Plaintiff in Support of Plaintiff's Response to County Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment" that Brackman believed the Clerk of the Allen Circuit and Superior Court had violated alleged "duties" as early as December 13, 2002, at least two months before the filing of the present action. The County Defendants also maintain that it is clear that Brackman understood that the office of the Clerk and the office of the Board of Commissioners of the County of Allen were two separate offices as early as January 8, 2002, when he sent a request for payment history to the office of the Clerk, as opposed to the office of the Board of Commissioners of the County of Allen. The County Defendants argue that Brackman failed to name Brown and/or Blosser to this suit when he initially filed, even though he had a clear understanding that the offices are independent of one another.

In Morissette v. Peters, 45 F.3d 1119 (7th Cir. 1994), the seventh Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a trial court's denial of a motion to amend in part because the plaintiff moved to amend late in the proceedings "when trial or resolution of the case via summary judgment was imminent." Id. At 1123. This court agrees with the County Defendants that the same result should occur in the present case, and holds that Brackman's delay in seeking to amend requires that the motion be denied.

The County Defendants further argue that Brackman's motion to amend should be denied because it is futile. The County Defendants point out that Brackman's filings make it clear that he wishes to amend his complaint in order to claim that the Clerks (Brown and Blosser) violated his rights by failing to assign a judge to an Allen Superior Court case, failing to send copies out of a court packet, and failing to rule on various motions. With respect to the copies, the County Defendants argue that Brackman's rights have not been violated by any alleged failure to provide documents because Brackman has not been harmed in his ability to seek redress for his grievances. The County Defendants also claim that Brackman did not suffer deprivation of property without due process as a result of any alleged action or inaction on the part of the Clerks and that, to the extent the Clerks failed to carry out their duties, any alleged failure amounts to no more than mere negligence, which is not actionable under Section 1983. The County Defendants acknowledge that the Clerk has an obligation to make public records available for inspection. However, the County Defendants maintain that the Clerk has no obligation to photocopy records and send them across the United States[1]. The County Defendants further argue that it is not the Clerk's responsibility to rule on motions or to assign judges or to act in any fashion with respect to cases pending in the Superior Court other than to accept filings and direct them to the appropriate file.

This court agrees with the County Defendants that, for the foregoing reasons, any amended complaint filed by Brackman would inevitably be disposed of through a dispositive motion. Therefore, Brackman's motion to amend will be denied for this additional reason.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, the County Defendants' motion for summary judgment is hereby GRANTED. Further, Brackman's motion to amend is hereby DENIED.

ORDER

On June 2, 2003, this court entered an order granting defendant Ann Loni Hoang's motion to dismiss, granting the State Defendants' motion to dismiss, and granting defendant Stanley Levine's motion to dismiss. As a result of this order the following defendants were granted a favorable judgment: Ann Loni Hoang; Stanley Levine; the State of Indiana; Steve Carter, Attorney General of Indiana; Governor Frank O'Bannon, Governor of the State of Indiana; and Sue Anne Gilroy, Former Secretary of the State of Indiana. The remaining named defendants in this case are: Allen County Attorney; County of Allen; Allen County Commissioners; Edwin Rousseau; Marla Irving; and Linda K. Bloom. These Defendants are known as the "County Defendants".

On June 2, 2003, the Clerk of the Court inadvertently entered Judgment in favor of all of the defendants. On June 16, 2003, the plaintiff, Mark A. Brackman ("Brackman") filed a Notice of Appeal. On June 25, 2003, the County Defendants filed a motion for summary judgment.

The Clerk's Judgment entered on June 2, 2003 is hereby VACATED and SET ASIDE. However, upon review of this cause the court has determined that there is no just reason for delay in entering a final judgment in favor of defendants Ann Loni Hoang, Stanley Levine, the State of Indiana; Steve Carter, Governor Frank O'Bannon, and Sue Anne Gilroy. Thus, the Clerk of the Court is instructed to enter an such a Judgment, entering final judgment with respect to these six defendants, pursuant to Rule 54(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

The County Defendants' motion for summary judgment shall be briefed out in accordance with applicable Local Rules. As Brackman is proceeding pro se, the Court issues contemporaneously therewith a Lewis v. Faulkner notice informing Brackman of his responsibility to Respond to the motion for summary judgment.

SO ORDERED this 27th day of June, 2003.

ORDER

This matter is before the court on three motions to dismiss, a motion for sanctions, a motion to enter default, an "objection to order", and a motion to change venue.

On March 3, 2003, defendant Ann Loni Hoang ("Hoang") proceeding pro se, filed a motion to dismiss and a motion for sanctions. On March 17, 2003, plaintiff Mark A. Brackman ("Brackman"), proceeding pro se, filed a "General Response to Motions to Continue, Motions for Additional Time, Motion to Dismiss and Other Preliminary Motions, Nunc Pro Tunc". Hoang has not filed a reply.

On March 20, 2003, the State Defendants[1] filed a motion to dismiss. On March 28, 2003, Brackman filed a response to the motion to dismiss. On April 10, 2003, Brackman filed a "Supplement to Complaint Persuant [sic] to Notice and Order Dated March 24, 2003" which he states is "in supplement to Response to Motion to Dismiss filed by the State Defendants...." Thus, the court will construe Brackman's April 10, 2003 filing as a supplemental response to the motion to dismiss[2]. The State Defendants have not filed a reply.

On April 21, 2003, defendant Stanley A. Levine ("Levine") filed a motion to dismiss, On April 28, 2003, Brackman filed a response to the motion to dismiss and also filed a "Trial Memorandum for Hearing on May 2, 2003", which the court construes as a supplemental response. Levine filed his reply on May 5, 2003. On May 19, 2003, Brackman filed a "Supplement to Response to Motion to Dismiss on Behalf of Defendant Stanley A. Levine".

On March 28, 2003, Brackman filed an "Application for Entry of Default of Defendant Ann Loni Hoang". Also, on May 5, 2003, Brackman filed an "Objection to 'Order' Dated April 28, 2003 For Cause". Finally, on May 23, 2003, Brackman filed a "Motion for Change of Venue for Cause".

Discussion

This case essentially arises from the decision of the Indiana courts to order Brackman to pay child support[3]. Brackman has now filed his second complaint in this court against participants in the state court case, and various state and county officials, in an attempt to reverse the state court decision.[4]

[2] Brackman has attempted to amend his complaint by added new allegations in several of his response to the motions to dismiss. These new allegations are improper and will not be considered. To the extent Brackman intends his responses to be a motion to amend complaint, such motion is denied.

[3] See Matter of the Paternity of C.L.H., Hoang v. Brackman, 689 N.E.2d 456 (Ind. Ct. App. 1998), transfer denied, 698 N.E.2d 1191.

[4] Brackman's previous complaint in this court, 1:00cv423, was dismissed on or about March 7, 2001.

State Defendants' Motion to Dismiss

Sometime around August 20, 2001, Brackman filed a summons and complaint on Ann Loni Hoang in the Allen Superior Court under cause number 02D07-8907-JP-000425. Brackman filed another complaint and summons on or about January 24, 2002, because he believed the original service was flawed. After Hoang failed to answer, Brackman filed a motion for default judgment, which was denied. Brackman requested the Indiana Supreme Court to appoint a special judge, which request was denied.

In his present complaint, Brackman alleges that the State Defendants conspired with the other defendants to deprive him of his right to redress. Brackman further asserts that the State Defendants are "directly or indirectly responsible for the acts, bad acts and omissions of Defendant County of Allen, Defendant County Attorney, including but not limited to an agent

Clerk of the Allen County Court as their supervisor or superior. Brackman also alleges that the Secretary of State and Attorney General or their agents are the State's lawmaking officers or policy-making officials, and are therefore liable. Finally, Brackman alleges that the State or its agents, having responsibility for the payment of salaries, wages financial or other pecuniary benefits to the other defendants is responsible for the acts of the other defendants. Brackman seeks monetary damages from the State Defendants.

A claim may be dismissed under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6) only if it is beyond doubt that there are no set of facts under which the complaint's allegations would entitle the plaintiff to relief. Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46 (1957). In deciding whether to grant a motion to dismiss, the court must accept the factual allegations as true and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff. Vickery v. Jones, 100 F.3d 1334, 1341 (7th Cir. 1996).

The State Defendants first argue that Brackman's suit is barred by the Eleventh Amendment. The Eleventh Amendment deprives the federal courts of subject matter jurisdiction to entertain claims against a state. Pennhurst State School and Hospital v. Halderman, 104 S.Ct. 900 (1984). Suits against state officials in their official capacities are deemed as against the State itself and are therefore equally barred. Kentucky v. Graham, 105 S.Ct. 3099 (1985); Meadows v. State of Indiana, 854 F.2d 1068 (7th Cir. 1988). Clearly the present suit against the State Defendants is barred by the Eleventh Amendment as Brackman has sued state officials in their official capacities.

The State Defendants further argue that the Rooker-Feldman doctrine provides an additional basis for granting their motion to dismiss. The Rooker-Feldman doctrine prohibits federal district courts from reviewing state court civil judgments, including all claims that are inextricably intertwined with those judgments. District of Columbia Court of Appeals v. Feldman, 460 U.S. 462 (1983); Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co., 263 U.S. 413 (1923). The State Defendants correctly argue that because Brackman is essentially asking this court to review the actions of an Indiana court, this court must refrain from hearing his claim.

The court notes that this is Brackman's third attempt to attack the defendants in federal court. Brackman previously filed a substantially similar complaint in the United States District Court for the District of Arizona under Cause Number CIV-99-19750PHX-PGR, and in this court under Cause Number 1:00cv423. Both this court and the District Court for the District of Arizona dismissed Brackman's complaint due to lack of subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to the Rooker-Feldman doctrine. Despite Brackman's protestations to the contrary, the Rooker-Feldman doctrine continues to be applicable to his claims and acts as a bar to such claims.

Next, the State Defendants argue that respondeat superior cannot be a basis for liability. Generally, an action under Section 1983 is premises upon a determination that conduct committed by a person acting under color of state law deprived another individual of rights, privileges and immunities secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States. Parratt v.

Taylor, 451 U.S. 527, 535 (1981), overruled in part on other grounds, Daniels v. Williams, 474 U.S. 327 (1986). This type of action is "based upon personal liability and predicated upon fault." Wolfe-Lillie v. Sonquist, 699 F.2d 864, 869 (7th Cir. 1983). Recovery against a supervisory official cannot be vicariously imposed on a theory of respondeat superior Williams v. Faulkner, 837 F.2d 304, 308 (7th Cir. 1988), aff'd sub nom. Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319 (1989). Nor can liability be established by a showing of negligent supervision on the official's part Rascon v. Hardiman, 803 F.2d 269, 273 (7th Cir. 1986).

In the present case, Brackman has made no allegations of personal liability on the part of the Governor, Attorney General or Secretary of State. Rather, he asserts that they are liable because they are responsible for the acts of their agents and employees. As a Section 1983 claim cannot be based upon respondeat superior, Brackman's complaint fails to state a cause of action and must be dismissed as to the State Defendants.

Finally, the State Defendants argue that Brackman fails to state a claim under 42 U.S.C. §1985. In order to establish a cause of action under Section 1985, a plaintiff must show that a defendant conspired with another person to deprive the plaintiff, or a class of which the plaintiff was a member, of equal protection of the laws or of equal privileges and immunities under the law. Koch v. Mirza, 869 F. Supp. 1031, 1038 (W.D.N.Y. 1994). Claims founded on Section 1985(2) must demonstrate some interference with the course of justice in state courts. Davis v. Hudgins, 896 F.Supp 570. Claims founded on Section 1985(3) must allege a class-based discriminatory motive on the part of the conspirators. Rosadio v. Curtis, 885 F.Supp. 1538, 1541 (M.D. Fla. 1995). In any case, a civil rights complaint is not sufficient unless it states specific allegations of fact indicating a deprivation of rights. Koch, 869 F.Supp. At 1037. Mere conclusory allegations are not sufficient to state a claim under Section 1985. Davis, 896 F.Supp. at 571.

This court agrees with the State Defendants that Brackman's mere accusations that these defendants violated Section 1985 are insufficient to support a claim. Therefore, the motion to dismiss will be granted.

Stanley Levine's Motion to Dismiss

Defendant Levine, when he was engaged in the private practice of law, represented Lori Hoang in a child support dispute between Hoang and Brackman. While it is unclear exactly what claims Brackman is alleging against Levine, it is clear that Brackman's claims arise from the state court suit and Brackman's attempts to seek redress from the Indiana Supreme Court.

Levine argues that the Rooker-Feldman doctrine bars any claim relating to Levine's role in the child support dispute. As discussed above, the Rooker-Feldman doctrine prohibits federal district courts from reviewing state court civil judgments. As Brackman is attempting to attack the state court proceedings, his claims against Levine are barred.

Levine further argues that, in any event, Brackman fails to state any claim against Levine with regard to the treatment of Brackman's "Summons and Claim/Petition" which was allegedly filed on August 20, 2001 in the state courts. It appears that the allegation in Brackman's complaint concerning Levine relate to Levine's involvement in the child support dispute. The only paragraph in the complaint which alleges any connection between Levine and the treatment of Brackman's Claim/Petition is paragraph 47, wherein Brackman alleges that all of the defendants "have acted in concert, individually, one with another, jointly, severally, or in various combinations directly or indirectly with intent to violate Plaintiff's due process rights and to violate Plaintiff's rights to redress of his grievances regarding obtaining a hearing on various 'issues' and motions." Beyond this vague allegation of Levine's involvement in a conspiracy, Brackman's complaint contains no allegations identifying conduct in which Levine might have engaged that has injured Brackman. Thus, this court agrees with Levine that Brackman has failed to state a claim against Levine with respect to the treatment of his Claim/Petition. Moreover, to the extent that Brackman is attempting to assert claims against Levine under Section 1983 or Section 1985, such claims must likewise be dismissed. With respect to Section 1983, it is clear that Levine is not a state actor. The mere fact that an attorney is a member of the State Bar does not mean the attorney acts under the color of state law, Miller v. Duffin, 637 F.Supp. 496, 502 (N.D.Ind. 1986). With respect to Section 1985, it is clear that Brackman has failed to allege that his rights were violated as a result of some class-based animus. Thus Brackman has failed to state a claim under Section 1985. Roach v. City of Evansville, 111 F.3d 544, 547 (7th Cir. 1997).

Defendant Ann Loni Hoang's Motion to Dismiss and Motion for Sanctions

Hoang, proceeding pro se, has requested that this case be dismissed, based on all the previous dismissals. Hoang states that she has not had any contact with Brackman for the last 14 years and that he has not paid any child support. Hoang further states that Brackman has filed repetitive lawsuits against her since 1996 and that she can no longer afford his harassment as her lawyers' fee has run up to over $40,000. Hoang also requests that the court sanction Brackman to prevent him from filing any additional lawsuits.

It is unclear from Brackman's complaint precisely what he is alleging against Hoang. As with the other defendants, it appears that Brackman is asserting that Hoang was involved in some sort or conspiracy in state court, which resulted in the court ordering him to pay child support out of his veteran's benefits. As noted above, this court is prohibited by the Rooker-Feldman doctrine from considering Brackman's collateral attacks on the state court judgment and proceedings. Moreover, as Hoang is not a state actor, Brackman has no basis for Section 1983 claims against her, nor has Brackman sufficiently plead a Section 1985 claim. Accordingly, Hoang's motion to dismiss will be granted.

Additionally, Brackman will be ordered to show cause why he should not be sanctioned for filing frivolous lawsuits against Hoang. It is clear that Brackman has filed at least three federal cases involving the state court proceedings arising from his child support dispute with Hoang. All cases, including this one, have been determined to be totally meritless. Even though Brackman is proceeding on his own behalf, without benefit of trained counsel, Brackman is still bound by the dictates of Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Wright v. Tackett, 39 F.3d 155 (7th Cir. 1994).

Brackman's Motion for Entry of Default Against Hoang

Brackman asserts that Hoang has failed to file a responsive pleading or otherwise defend within the time period required by law and that he is therefore entitled to an entry of default. Brackman asserts that Hoang was personally served with his complaint on February 28, 2003 and has failed to respond.

The record shows, however, that Hoang timely filed a motion to dismiss on March 3, 2003. As a motion to dismiss is a responsive pleading, Brackman is not entitled to an entry of default. See Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b).

Brackman's Objection to "Order"

Brackman states that he objects to an order issued by Magistrate Judge Cosbey, dated April 28, 2003. Brackman claims that the court "tried to trick Plaintiff into entering the Magistrate's jurisdiction...", and insists that the Magistrate is biased against him.

The order to which Brackman refers to is an order disposing of Brackman's "Objection to 'Order' Dated March 25, 2003 For Cause". In this April 28, 2003 order, this court upheld Magistrate Cosbey's ruling on Brackman's motion to compel, as Magistrate Cosbey's ruling was not clearly erroneous or contrary to law. Brackman now complains that the Magistrate's order was issued before Brackman's reply was belatedly filed. This court has reviewed the reply, which was filed on March 28, 2003, and finds that nothing in the reply would change the underlying ruling in the Magistrate's March 25, 2003 order.

The court assures Brackman that no trickery is involved with respect to Magistrate's jurisdiction over this case. As is routine in this court, all non-dispositive matters are referred to the Magistrate judge for ruling. Thus, by virtue of filing a case in this court, Brackman has "entered into" the Magistrate's jurisdiction. Therfore, Brackman's current Objection to Order will be denied.

Brackman's Motion for Change of Venue

Brackman has requested a change of venue because he believes that this court is violating his rights by not issuing an entry of default against defendant Hoang, and by ignoring his objections to orders. Brackman states that he believes he cannot obtain a fair or impartial hearing "where various court officials are acting to protect their friend, (also a judge) who is a defendant in the same town or county as Fort Wayne."

Brackman has not identified any other division or district to which venue could properly be transferred. Nor does Brackman discuss 28 U.S.C. §1404, relating to change of venue, or explain how a change of venue could possibly be "for the convenience of parties and witnesses".

In any event, there is no evidence that Brackman's rights are being violated. The simple truth of the matter is that Brackman has repeatedly filed frivolous and meritless claims and motions. If Brackman does not agree with this court's rulings, he may appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Conclusion

On the basis of the foregoing, the following motions are hereby GRANTED:

(1) Defendant Ann Loni Hoang's motion to Dismiss;

(2) State Defendants' Motion to Dismiss; and

(3) Defendant Levine's Motion to Dismiss.

Further, the following motions are hereby DENIED:

(1) Brackman's Application for Entry of Default of Defendant Ann Loni Hoang;

(2) Brackman's Objection to "Order" Dated April 28, 2003 For Cause; and

(3) Brackman's motion for Change of Venue for Cause.

Further, with respect to Hoang's motion for sanctions, Brackman is hereby ORDERED TO SHOW CAUSE as to why he should not be sanctioned for violating Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Brackman shall respond to the Order to Show Cause within 30 days of the date of this order.

Entered: June 2, 2003.

MARK A. BRACKMAN, Plaintiff, - vs - STATE OF INDIANA; STEVE CARTER, ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR THE STATE OF INDIANA; GOVERNOR FRANK O'BANNON, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF INDIANA; SUE A. GILROY, SECRETARY OF STATE; ALLEN COUNTY ATTORNEY; COUNTY OF ALLEN; ALLEN COUNTY COMMISSIONERS; EDWIN ROUSSEAU, Commissioner; MARLA IRVING, Commissioner; LINDA K. BLOOM, Commissioner; STANLEY A. LEVINE, (An Attorney); ANN LONI HOANG, real party in interest, Defendants.	No. 1:03CV068 COMPLAINT

Plaintiff alleges:

1. This case is where Plaintiff (pro per, not pro se) filed a Petition in a County Court for redress of grievances was ignored by Defendant Ann Loni who failed to Answer and the clerk of the court refused to file an "Entry of Default" – Twice. Plaintiff filed Motions that were ignored. Plaintiff filed for intervention by the Supreme Court and was denied due process. Plaintiff filed with risk management and has exhausted all State remedies. It is a prima facie case of a First and Fifth amendment rights violation where the question is whether or not Plaintiff's right to Petition for redress of grievances and due process have been violated.

Order Dismissing Original Action

Mark A. Brackman, pro se, has submitted a "Application For Petition For Writ of Mandamus Or In The Alternative Emergency Petition For Order To Show Cause Why The Relief Requested Should Not Be Granted Regarding An Original Action Of First Impression Pursuant To Indiana Constitution, Art 7, Sec 4 Or Indiana Appellate Rule 4(B)(3)" and accompanying application papers. Relator seeks relief under the provisions of the Rules of Procedure for Original Actions. The relator's pleadings are procedurally deficient in that they do not comply with the rules in many respects. However, the Court looks past the procedural defects and addresses the original action request on the merits.

The relator has failed to show the respondent trial court has exceeded its jurisdiction or the failure to act when under a duty to act and/or that the remedy available on appeal would be wholly inadequate. Original Action Rule 3(A). Because the relator seeks an unquestionably inappropriate remedy under the rules and law governing writs of mandamus or prohibition, this original action is DISMISSED. See original Action Rule 2(D). The relator is reminded that no petitions for rehearing or motions to reconsider are allowed to be filed. Original Action Rule 5(C).

The Clerk is directed to send a copy of this order to Mark A. Brackman, 7027 W. Turquoise Avenue, Peoria, AZ, 85345; to the Allen County Superior Court; to the Honorable William L. Briggs; to any counsel of record; and to Steve Carter, Attorney General of Indiana.

MARK A. BRACKMAN, Plaintiff,	)
v.	)	Civil No. 1:03cv68
STATE OF INDIANA, et al., Defendants.	)

ORDER

This matter is before the court on three motions to dismiss, a motion for sanctions, a motion to enter default, an "objection to order", and a motion to change venue.

On March 3, 2003, defendant Ann Loni Hoang ("Hoang") proceeding pro se, filed a motion to dismiss and a motion for sanctions. On March 17, 2003, plaintiff Mark A. Brackman ("Brackman"), proceeding pro se, filed a "General Response to Motions to Continue, Motions for Additional Time, Motion to Dismiss and Other Preliminary Motions, Nunc Pro Tunc". Hoang has not filed a reply.

On March 20, 2003, the State Defendants[1] filed a motion to dismiss. On March 28, 2003, Brackman filed a response to the motion to dismiss. On April 10, 2003, Brackman filed a "Supplement to Complaint Persuant [sic] to Notice and Order Dated March 24, 2003" which he states is "in supplement to Response to Motion to Dismiss filed by the State Defendants...." Thus, the court will construe Brackman's April 10, 2003 filing as a supplemental response to the motion to dismiss[2]. The State Defendants have not filed a reply.

On April 21, 2003, defendant Stanley A. Levine ("Levine") filed a motion to dismiss, On April 28, 2003, Brackman filed a response to the motion to dismiss and also filed a "Trial Memorandum for Hearing on May 2, 2003", which the court construes as a supplemental response. Levine filed his reply on May 5, 2003. On May 19, 2003, Brackman filed a "Supplement to Response to Motion to Dismiss on Behalf of Defendant Stanley A. Levine".

On March 28, 2003, Brackman filed an "Application for Entry of Default of Defendant Ann Loni Hoang". Also, on May 5, 2003, Brackman filed an "Objection to 'Order' Dated April 28, 2003 For Cause". Finally, on May 23, 2003, Brackman filed a "Motion for Change of Venue for Cause".

Discussion

This case essentially arises from the decision of the Indiana courts to order Brackman to pay child support[3]. Brackman has now filed his second complaint in this court against participants in the state court case, and various state and county officials, in an attempt to reverse the state court decision.[4]

PETITION FOR REHEARING

Mark A. Brackman, respectfully petitions for a rehearing of the Court's denial of his Petition for a Writ of Certiorari, dated November 8, 2004 for the following compelling reasons:

By denying Petitioner's Petition for Writ of Certiorari, this Court of last resort would approve and condone Allen County Superior Court's ignoring Petitioner's Petition(s) and encourage all States' Courts to ignore any or all Petition(s) by any citizen, thereby allowing such lower courts to make a mockery of a citizen's First Amendment right to petition for redress of grievances.

Further, Petitioner will never be allowed to petition the lower court(s) for any reason and all of his future petitions will be ignored, as this Honorable Court would have sanctioned the lower court's denial of Petitioner's right to petition.

By denying Petitioner's Petition for Writ of Certiorari this Court denies justice and sets precedent for extinguishing all citizen's right to petition for redress of their grievances, leaving nothing but "street justice" and chaos for all citizens.

It is clear Allen County Superior Court has departed far from the accepted and usual course of judicial proceedings and the U.S. District Court of Northern District of Indiana has sanctioned the departure by a lower court, as to call for an exercise of this Honorable Court's supervisory power.

WHEREFORE, Petitioner requests a rehearing of his Petition for Writ of Certiorari including an understanding of prima facie evidence that Allen County Superior Court ignored his two petitions, the U.S. District Court's ignoring the subject of rights violation(s) and neither court should be rewarded, encouraged, nor their conduct condoned, allowed, promoted, tolerated or approved by a denial of the Petition for Writ of Certiorari. The petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted November 29, 2004.
